To begin with the webinar, Prof. R.K Singla shed light upon the anxiety and pressure that this change due to pandemic has brought in our lives. He also shared a few tips to stay grounded and relaxed, like taking a moment for being thankful, lifting up your mood by doing what interests you, creating and following a relaxed lifestyle and finding exercises that can help keep the mind and body in sound state.

Dr. Balram K. Gupta, the guest speaker, highlighted the key points for building up happy and positive minds during pandemic times like covid-19. He shared his thoughts by telling a story of a young boy named CORONA where he concluded that in a challenging time like this pandemic what matters most is how you handle the situation. He highlighted the points to change our mindset in an optimistic way so that we can think, feel and know how to face challenges. He also spread a light on positive outcomes of this aspect by praising the advancement of technology and improvement in one's skill by interacting globally during this pandemic. By these sayings he concluded that there is no substitute for physical interaction is a myth and an outcome of a sick mindset, only cultivated happy minds can understand that there is an alternative for physical interactions i.e technology. He said that excellence must be the goal of youth and the recipe he shared to experience happiness is by doing our best, believing and thinking positive and feeling happy about that, as happiness is human right.

He also focused upon nurturing good values to keep ourselves happy and not letting them get devalued. With the increasing domestic violence, murders and crimes in the society, cultivating and nurturing happy minds is necessary, he added. He also cited the importance of Bhakti in our lives to control anger and cultivate happy minds and positive vibes. At last, he concluded that a positive mind leads to a creative mind.

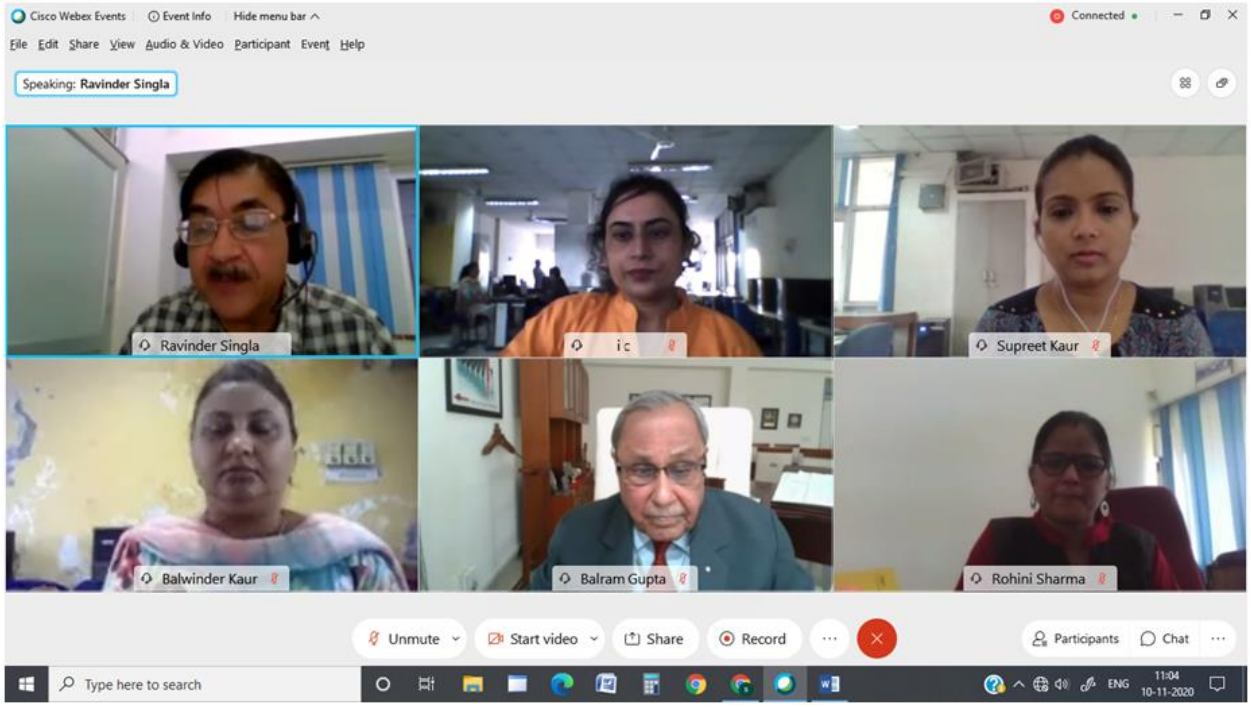

Prof. V.R. Sinha through his thoughts focused upon what matters is a persons' attitude in such hard and testing situations. And how with a humble start and a positive attitude and mindset one can reach the zenith of success.

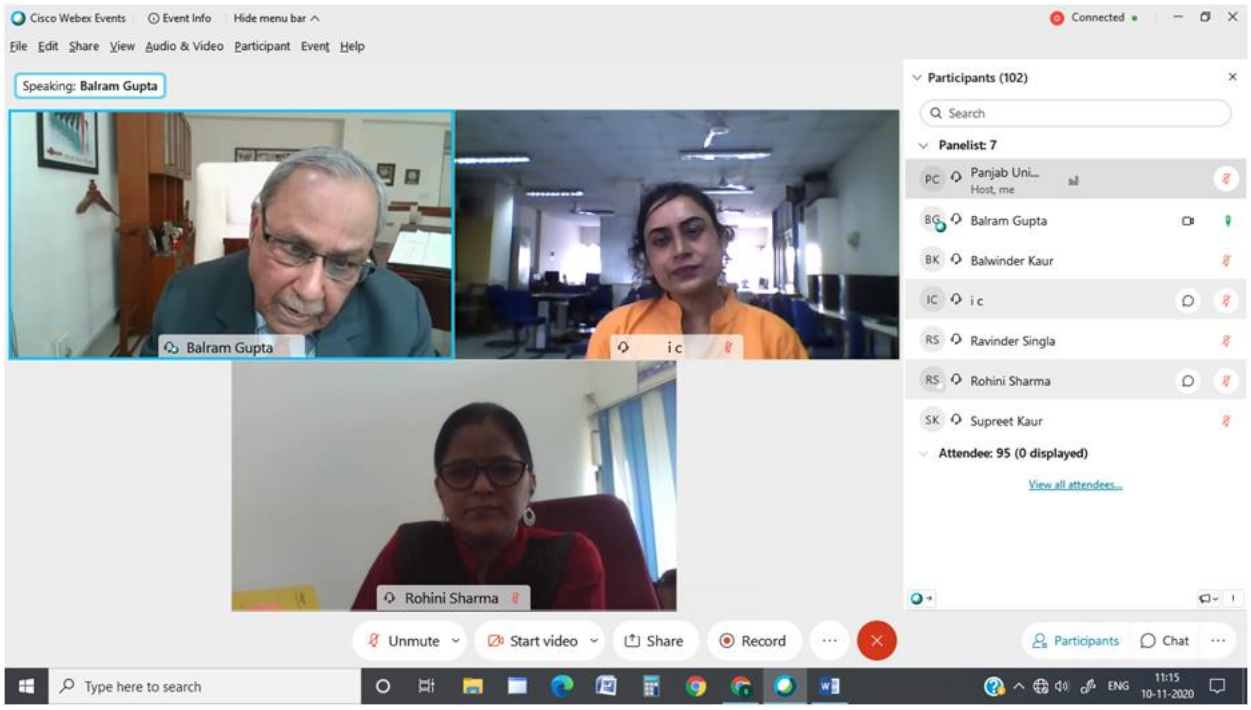

To summarize, the session was very interactive, full of various enriching stories and an amalgamation of thoughts and positivity of Dr. Balram K. Gupta.
